Overview

Lindsay is of counsel in the firm's Honolulu office and is a member of the Litigation Department and Environmental Law Practice Group.

Lindsay represents landowners, developers, major and small businesses, nonprofits, educational and financial institutions, government entities, and individuals across a wide array of legal matters. She represents clients in all aspects of litigation, including administrative hearings, mediation, arbitration, trial, and appeals, with particular experience in complex commercial and real property disputes, state and federal employment related claims, as well intellectual property rights, and tort and products liability claims. She also routinely counsels clients regarding legal and contractual requirements and assists in the development of strategies for compliance, risk mitigation, and dispute avoidance.

Lindsay also has extensive experience with environmental laws and proceedings, including providing advice regarding regulatory compliance, and representing clients in enforcement actions, contested case hearings, administrative appeals, and high-stakes state and federal lawsuits.

Lindsay graduated summa cum laude from the University of Hawai'i, William S. Richardson School of Law and obtained her B.S. in Biology, with a minor in Psychology, with honors from the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, Canada.

Prior to Cades Schutte, Lindsay was a partner and co-chair of the Environmental Practice Group at another major law firm in Hawai'i. She also served as a Judicial Extern to the Honorable David A. Ezra of the U.S. District Court for District of Hawai'i, and a research assistant to University of Hawai'i Law Professor Denise Antolini. Lindsay has been recognized by Super Lawyers® in its Rising Stars list for the practice areas of Civil Litigation: Defense, Environmental, Employment; and Litigation: Defense, Appellate, and Administrative Law.
